Question:

Is it normal to put all the functions of code into a separate file than the main function? If so, why and what is the point of doing that?